

Alqvimia Practice: Anthropocosmic House

The Anthropocosmic Man is Schwaller de Lubicz's term for the human being as the living image and microcosm of the cosmos. The term Anthropocosmos fuses anthropos (man) and cosmos (ordered universe), revealing that to the ancient Egyptians, man and cosmos were not separate, but made of the same fundamental essence, and operated according to the same Divine principles.

Schwaller de Lubicz's work in "The Temple Of Man" demonstrates that the layout of the Temple of Luxor mirrors the proportions and functions of the human body, with architectural spaces corresponding to bodily organs, systems, and spiritual centers. The Temple of Luxor is a blueprint for the human potential of Anthropocosmic Man.

"The temple is the image of Man, the measure of the created world."

— The Temple of Man, Vol. I, Introduction, p. 5

- The human body, like the temple, reflects the structure of the cosmos.
- The same laws of geometry, number, and function govern both.
- Therefore, man is not a copy of the cosmos, but an expression of it—a conscious microcosm within the macrocosm.

The ancient Egyptians lived within this cosmic harmony—not as belief, but as direct experiential knowledge encoded in their sacred art, architecture, and language.

"The Temple, in its dimensions and measures, embodies the Canon of Proportions governing Man and the Universe."

— The Temple of Man, Vol. II, "The Canon of Proportions"

The Canon expresses:

- Harmonic ratios (1:√2, 2:3, 5:8, φ)
- Geometries like the Golden Triangle
- Recurrence of Fibonacci-like sequences

These aren't decorative—they're vibrational truths. The temple is a human being, proportionally aligned with cosmic law.

The layout of the temple is not only anatomical but initiatory: as one moves through the temple, one ascends through levels of consciousness—awakening spiritual development in the human body.

"The Temple is the Man who is becoming."

— The Temple of Man, Vol. II, p. 155

Thus, to become Anthropocosmic is to embody the Divine order, to awaken latent cosmic memory within the form of Man.

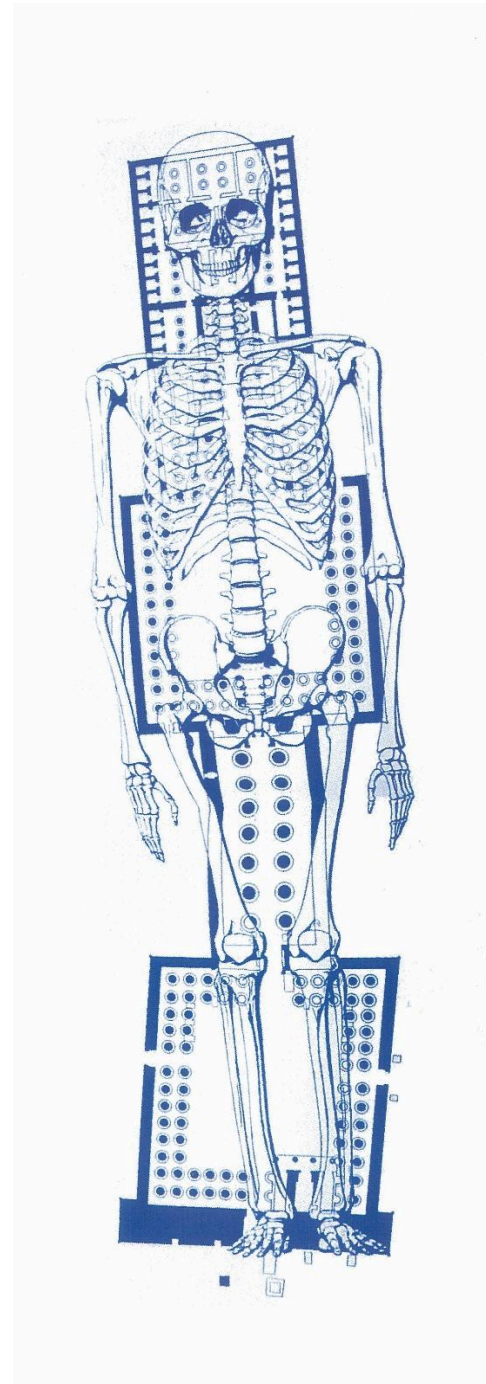

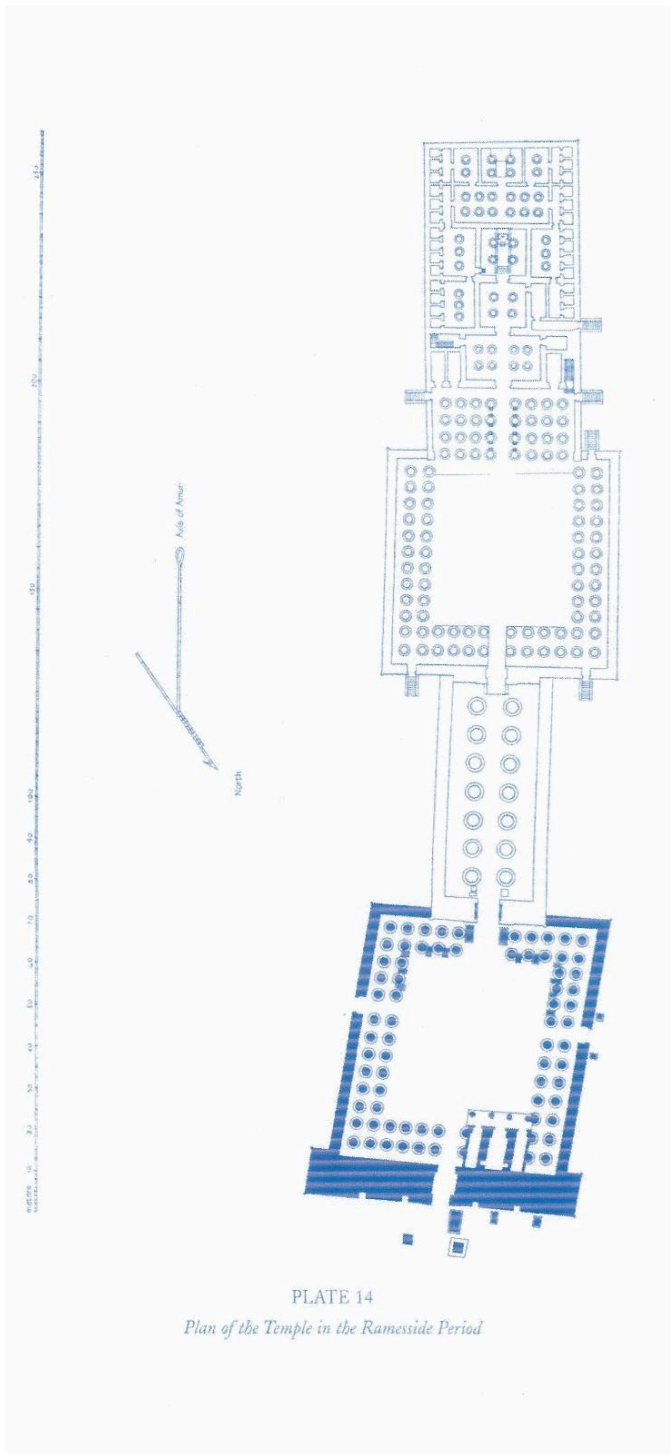

- The Anthropocosmic Man dissolves the boundary between subject and object, self and world.
- It reclaims gnosis—a direct knowledge of Unity through embodied insight.
- It implies that humanity's spiritual destiny is not ascent away from matter, but transformation through it.
- Initiation is transformation: To become Anthropocosmic is to transcend ego and embody universal law.

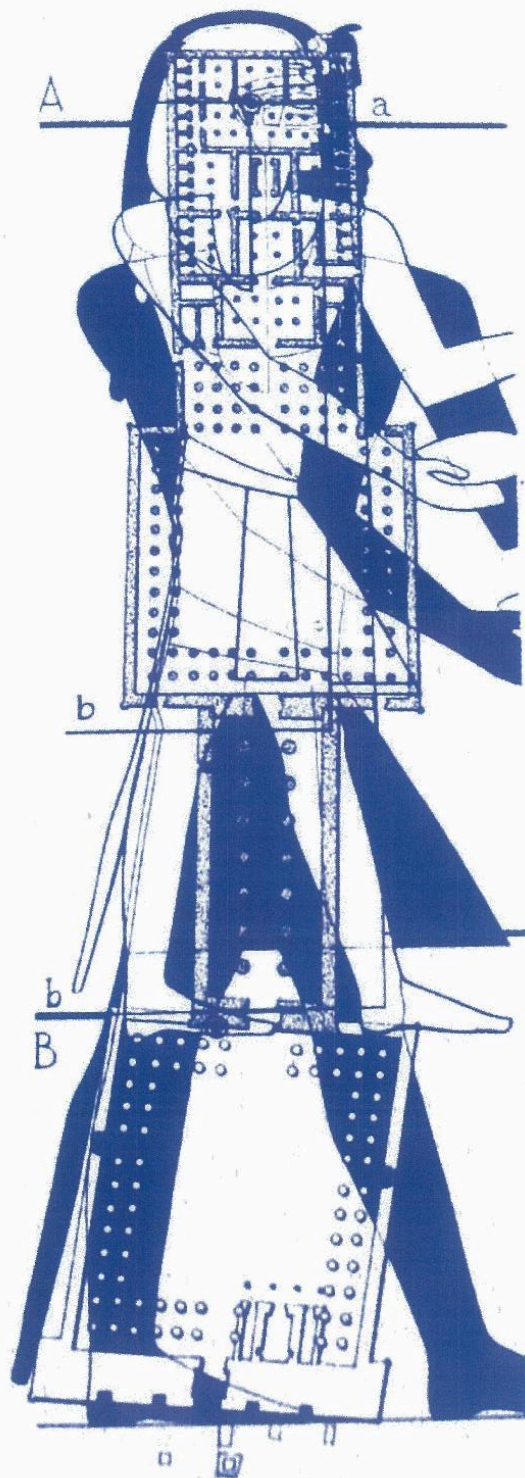

"The great error of modern thought is to see Man as separated from the world he inhabits."

— The Temple of Man, Vol. I, p. 12

For Schwaller de Lubicz, the Anthropocosmic Man is both a key to interpreting Egyptian metaphysics and a spiritual possibility for humanity's potential. These teachings reveal a cosmology in which the body is temple, the temple is cosmos, and initiation is remembrance of Unity.

The intention and usage of this Anthropocosmic House holds the evocation of whole body Enlightenment. It is allowing the True Form - the vehicle or temple for Divine Enlightenment to be made manifest. Its intention and volumetric current initiates the spark of eternal gnosis. It initiates the spark that begins to awaken the "Temple of Man" — the true form through which the Divine may be lived.

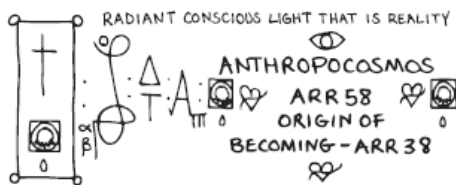

1. The Total Clearing Cards

The Central Vial

The Anthropocosmic House is the first house that has the empowerment of an extended central wand that enters a capstone within its configuration. The central rod stands from the base, infinitely above to the gold capstone holding the diamond, with a direct proportion to the sacred geometry of the Great Pyramid. The top point is the point of contact, the Divine reflection of 'as above reflecting as so below'. On the base are the energies A1441 – representing a clear passage to the Divine Star and A0050, the Present Moment is an Absolute Eternity.

1. A0058: Anthropocosmos

"Man is made in the image of the cosmos.
His body is the expression of cosmic laws."
— The Temple of Man, Vol. I

Anthropocosmos is the principle that the human being is a microcosm of the macrocosm—a living, conscious reflection of the cosmos itself. Schwaller de Lubicz asserts that the human form encodes the same proportions, harmonies, and laws that govern the universe. This energy is about humanity's true evolutionary potential as a creative force at this highest possibility - 'Anthropocosmos'.

Man is the centre of the Universe and is the Universe. He is the whole Raison d'être of the Universe. This energy is about humanity's True evolutionary potential. The moment of Being involved in Creation and its True possibility as a Creative Force at this highest possibility - 'Anthropocosmos'.

2. A0038: Origin Of Becoming

"The origin of becoming is the point where the divine essence projects itself into movement."

— The Temple of Man, Vol. I, Introduction, p. 12 (English edition)

This origin is a perpetual, metaphysical condition. In every instant, the cosmos is becoming—being, unfolding itself into experience. In the human being (Anthropocosmic Man), this origin lives in the capacity for creative consciousness.

"Becoming is not the opposite of being, but its expression."
— The Temple of Man, Vol. I, Introduction (paraphrased theme)

UNIVERSIDAD DE LA
ALQVIMIA

This echoes Hermetic and alchemical thought: the Divine is not static. The universe is not a completed object, but a living process—a becoming that repeats the original act of Divine emergence in every form and every moment.

- Being (the unmanifest, eternal) is the source.
- Becoming (manifestation, time, evolution) is the unfolding of that source into experience.
- The point of origin is where “the verb acting in God” (to create) initiates the cosmic process.

Sequence of fixations are perfectly articulated.

New species = Enlightenment. Species on its way to becoming Cosmic Man.

3. Slow Force Field - Is the push to create ‘space’ in which to remember to breathe and feel.
4. A0281: Billion Year Slow Glass - Dissolving the pressure of time.
5. A0168: Soulfire- Igniting the fire of Transformation.
6. A0343 - Mahasamadhi Siddhi Of Adi Da, the specific current of the transcendental state.

POSITION 1:

7. A0040: Qualitative Transformation

“This transformation is not quantitative, but qualitative: it consists of a change of state.”

— The Temple of Man, Vol. I, Introduction, p. 12 (English edition)

In The Temple of Man, Schwaller de Lubicz presents qualitative transformation as a core principle—the process through which a being evolves, not by accumulation or mechanical change, but by an inner elevation of state or essence. It is not quantitative (measurable, external), but alchemical and inner—a transmutation of consciousness.

Schwaller de Lubicz distinguishes between:

- Quantitative change: movement in space, time, or number (e.g., a stone rolling downhill).
- Qualitative transformation: evolution of being or consciousness (e.g., a seed becoming a tree, or a human awakening spiritual perception).

Qualitative transformation is how Anthropocosmic Man re-integrates his Divine essence. The goal is not just knowledge, but transformation of the self into alignment with cosmic law. The aim of the temple was to bring about in man a qualitative transformation through conscious participation in the sacred.

'Qualitative Transformation' is instantly seen as the activation of Current as a living process through the chemical form. Chemistry of stress to Chemistry of Enlightenment. Appears that the body veins etc are swelling to the Real Form, not the form under gravity and death. Opening the way to the Chemistry of Enlightenment.

POSITION 2:

8. A0169: The Things Contained In The Human Genesis

"All things are contained in the human, and the human is in all things."

— The Temple of Man, Vol. I, Introduction, p. 14 (English edition)

"Things contained in the human" is the totality of cosmic principles, functions, and archetypes—a reflection of the universal order within the microcosm of man. This idea is central to Anthropocosmos, wherein man contains all that exists in the universe, not metaphorically, but structurally, functionally, and spiritually.

"The ancient Egyptian saw in man the synthesis of all creation."

— The Temple of Man, Vol. I, p. 17

Human anatomy, consciousness, and being are patterned after the cosmic order.

Every function of nature—mineral, vegetal, animal, celestial—is echoed in the functions of the human.

The temple, built according to the human form, is thus a map of the cosmos and a tool for the initiate to rediscover their inner universal structure.

The "things contained in the human" are divine powers latent in every person, activated through gnosis and transformation.

The Things Contained in the Human Genesis.

Image of Divine = Likeness of God.

Return to Unity

Effect: Vessel of understanding, Light Current shining down from above.

POSITION 3:

9. A0148: The Verb Acting In God

“The verb acting in God is to create.”

— The Temple of Man, Vol. I, Introduction, p. 10 (English translation)

This phrase - “the verb acting in God” - encapsulates the Egyptian conception that God is not a static being but a dynamic, creative act. The Verb here refers to the Logos, the creative Word, the generating vibration—the primordial act by which the Divine becomes manifest. Creation is not a past event but a perpetual emanation.

The human being, as Anthropocosmic, reflects this principle: to become fully human is also to become a conscious co-creator.

- The Verb is not merely speech or language; it is the active, formative force through which the divine essence becomes creation. It is both spiritual vibration and intelligent order—the origin of form and structure in the universe.
- The Verb does not describe God, it is God's act—specifically, the act of creating the cosmos.

“The Verb is not speech—it is the force that brings number and geometry into being; it is the shaping breath of the divine.”

— The Temple of Man, Vol. I, p. 12 (paraphrased theme)

Vision: Omnipresent Form appeared - shape but no definition - held within it was the current of pulse that worked the world, was the action as though the blood and muscles created the Current of Life.

Effect: Felt as a current entering the body particularly through the blood pulsing as action. Current - Movement - Action

10. A0149: The Quality Of Space

In The Temple of Man, the idea of “the quality of space” is a metaphysical principle that transcends geometric extension—space is not empty or neutral, but inherently structured, vibratory, and meaningful. For the ancient Egyptians, as Schwaller explains, space had directional qualities, functional resonances, and symbolic dimensions. It was qualitative, not merely quantitative. Architectural space was designed not just for physical movement, but to evoke transformations of consciousness.

“Space possesses a quality. The ancient Egyptians attributed a specific value to each direction, to each point of orientation in space, for space itself was not empty but alive with force.”

— The Temple of Man, Vol. I, Part One, Chapter: The Psychology of Space (English edition)

The quality of space was an initiatory tool—it could amplify, transform, or contain energetic functions (just as the human body does).

The spatial layout mirrored the human body (Anthropocosmos), and thus encoded the qualities of functional space.

Movement through the temple from the entrance to the sanctuary was a journey through increasingly refined qualities of space, culminating in divine resonance.

The Quality of Space Which Makes Form. The Numbers become form as the Divine Current (like sunlight on plants) activates. Ignites growth into form. Sunlight shining on chromosomes, numbers -> form. Effect: Initiates or ignites.

POSITION 4:

11. A0143: Glands Of Encephalon

The "glands of the encephalon"—especially the pineal gland and pituitary gland—are sacred centers of perception and spiritual function within the human head. These glands are not simply anatomical structures in the Egyptian symbolic worldview: they represent metaphysical organs of initiation, spiritual vision, and resurrection.

The encephalon is the Greek-rooted term for the entire brain, but Schwaller de Lubicz focuses specifically on its central endocrine glands—the pineal and pituitary. These are treated as the subtle “inner eyes” of the initiate, capable of perceiving divine reality.

"The encephalon, whose secret is the pineal gland, is the regulator of our temporal and spiritual life."

— The Temple of Man, Vol. II, Chapter: The Human Head and the Sacred, p. 292 (English edition)

The pineal gland is associated with the Eye of Horus, which is not just a symbol of physical sight, but of inner vision, intuitive knowing, and resurrective consciousness.

Ancient Egyptians understood this gland to be:

- A resonance chamber for spiritual initiation.
- The seat of perception beyond duality.
- Functionally aligned with the Sanctuary of the temple—its most sacred and hidden space.

"The sanctuary is situated at the cranial vault, where the sacred glands of the encephalon reside. This is the summit of initiation."

— The Temple of Man, Vol. II, p. 307

Glands of Encephalon. The Golden Current appears to stimulate glandular centers - shifting to a higher vibration. Centres of Life - Points at which Light - Chemistry of Enlightenment, cosmic mind is activated - secretion - nerve nectar of Amrita Nadi.

POSITION 5:

12. A0120: The Theban Revelation

The “Theban Revelation” is the profound teaching encoded specifically in the Temple of Luxor—located in ancient Thebes (modern-day Luxor)—which reveals the Egyptian understanding of Man as the image and measure of the cosmos.

This revelation is not just symbolic or philosophical—it is mathematically, anatomically, and spiritually constructed into the temple’s architecture. The “Theban Revelation” is Schwaller de Lubicz’s term for this esoteric doctrine, discerned through his study of the Luxor temple, that the human body embodies the Divine order.

“The Temple of Luxor reveals what I have called the Theban Revelation: the mystery of the cosmic Man inscribed in stone, the synthesis of the whole doctrine of the Anthropocosmos.”

— The Temple of Man, Vol. II, p. 331 (English edition)

This "revelation" is the culmination of Egyptian sacred science:

- Man is not just created by the divine, but as the divine—in proportion, function, and destiny.
- The temple was not built by imitating the human body, but rather, it reveals that the human form itself was already structured by cosmic law, and the temple makes this visible in stone.

The revelation is called “Theban” because it is specifically encoded in the Temple of Luxor, in the ancient city of Thebes. Other temples express related principles, but Luxor uniquely maps the full human form—from feet (entrance) to crown (sanctuary).

“No other temple in Egypt expresses the human plan with such clarity; this is why we call it the Theban Revelation.”

— The Temple of Man, Vol. II, p. 332 (paraphrased)

The Theban Revelation. Initiating or turning on switches (clicking noise) as flesh is turned on to flicking nadis or new circulatory, enjoy a higher vibration, energising subtle nervous feeling dimension. Electrifying - ganglia nerves.

13. A0121: Materialising Fire

The term “Materialising Fire” is used to describe a primordial cosmic force - a principle by which spirit becomes matter, or essence becomes form. This Fire is not physical combustion but the generative impulse behind manifestation, the active agent through which the Divine Idea enters into the density of creation.

“The creative, materialising Fire is the divine Word descending into form; it is the movement that gives geometry its substance, the immobile becoming mobile.”

— The Temple of Man, Vol. I, Part One, “The Doctrine of Becoming”, p. 58 (English edition)

This Fire:

- Materialises the Word- translating divine intention into structure.
- Animates geometry - turning abstract proportion into living, resonant form.
- Is symbolised by the solar principle (Ra) in Egyptian theology, not merely as sunlight, but as conscious, creative force.

The Materialising Fire (Bring from Spirit Realm -> Materialising) Process of working the Combustion of the flame. Pushing backwards and forwards, pushing and swaying energies combining to sacred flame. N <-> S, E <-> W, pushing and waking the flame into Combustion, igniting the flame. Effect of using fire moving down nerves on nerve pathways -> the transmission of fire.

POSITION 6:

14. A0160: Function of The Intelligence Through The Crossing

The “function of intelligence through the crossing” in the context of the intersection of vertical and horizontal axes—is a symbolic structure that underlies both human consciousness and Egyptian temple design.

This crossing - the intersection of:

- The vertical axis (symbolizing the spiritual, timeless, immutable),
- And the horizontal axis (symbolizing the temporal, material, mutable) -

is the locus of awakened intelligence. It is the point where consciousness becomes capable of perceiving the relationship between eternal principles and temporal experiences.

“The function of intelligence is born through the crossing of the vertical, immutable axis and the horizontal, mutable one. This crossing creates the field of consciousness.”

— The Temple of Man, Vol. I, Part One, Chapter: The Symbolique, p. 41 (English edition)

- The vertical axis represents Being—the axis of essence, divine law, eternal truth.
- The horizontal axis represents Becoming—the realm of manifestation, time, and change.

Where these two intersect—in the heart (symbolically) or the center of the cross (geometrically)—intelligence emerges. Not mere mental function, but spiritual intelligence: the ability to perceive meaning through analogy, to unify opposites, and to participate in the Divine order.

“Man is the consciousness of the cosmos. He is the one who unites the vertical of the divine and the horizontal of creation.”

— The Temple of Man, Vol. I, p. 20

The Function of Intelligence through the Crossing. Head - new anthropocosmic brain mind, whole bodily.

15. A0113: The Verb Is Root Of Heaven

“The Verb is the root of heaven, the creating action, the active source of the manifested cosmos.”

— The Temple of Man, Vol. I, Introduction, p. 11 (English edition)

Schwaller de Lubicz makes the profound assertion that “the verb is the root of heaven”. It reflects that creation begins not with form, but with vibration, with Word—the Verb—which acts as the generating force of manifestation.

This idea aligns with the Egyptian understanding that the divine speaks the world into being. The Verb is not merely speech but a vibratory creative principle—the active Logos—through which the invisible becomes visible.

The Verb is not just a word, but an act—a divine movement that sets Being into motion. It is the Materialising Fire, the initiator of space, time, and geometry.

As Anthropocosmic beings, humans also contain this verb-principle (creative agency) and can speak into form—not only through language but through action aligned with divine proportion and consciousness.

Hence:

“Man, as the image of the cosmos, contains the Verb—and thus contains the potential to recreate heaven within.”

— (Paraphrased theme from The Temple of Man, Vol. II)

The Verb is the Root of Heaven. When the root of action is Radiance = Love. Root comes out of the Living Current of Radiance - Action is Love - Love is Action. Effect: Genesis impulse, God, product. The force of the Current in action is the creation. Activates the current, activates the motion, ignites the Creative Force. Effect: Igniting, activating, movement. Energising movement forward.

POSITION 7 [NORTH]:

16. A0042: Cosmic Consciousness

“Cosmic consciousness is the awakened state in which man perceives himself as the measure and image of the universe, not through abstraction, but through direct knowledge of his own structure as the reflection of cosmic order.”

— The Temple of Man, Vol. I, Part One: Doctrine of Anthropocosmos, p. 15 (English edition)

This state of consciousness is the culmination of the Theban Revelation: that man is not separate from the cosmos, but contains it—and can know it through initiation, geometry, and symbolique.

The goal of Egyptian initiation, as reconstructed by Schwaller de Lubicz, was precisely to awaken cosmic consciousness:

“The temple leads man to the realization of cosmic consciousness—not as belief, but as experience. This is the function of initiation.”

— The Temple of Man, Vol. II, Conclusion

In this sense, cosmic consciousness is not a mystical escape from the body—but the realization of the body as cosmos, the temple as self, and matter as spirit made visible.

Realigning to the Real Capacity of brain-mind - ‘Cosmic Consciousness’. Infinitely above the brain-mind has a wonderful height and capacity of ‘Real Alignment’, not scrunched down.

17. A0031: Vision of Function Power - The Neter

The “neter” is a “function-power”—a living cosmic principle that expresses a specific function within creation. The “vision of function power” is the capacity to perceive these neter not as mythological deities, but as archetypal forces active within the universe, the human being, and the temple.

“The vision of the function-power, the neter, is the awareness that all that exists is the expression of a function of universal law; each neter is a cosmic function that governs a process, an organ, a state of consciousness.”

— The Temple of Man, Vol. I, Part One, “Symbolique and the Function of Intelligence,” p. 46 (English edition)

The “vision of the function-power” is the initiate’s awakened intelligence—the ability to:

- See beyond forms to their governing functions.
- Perceive cosmic forces within nature and self.
- Understand that symbols (in hieroglyphs, temples, and myths) are not metaphorical, but functional diagrams.

This intelligence is not logical, it is “symbolique”—a language that reveals the functional and vibratory essence of reality.

The inside becomes the outside. Networks awaken deep within the brain and to the surface, activation of an evolutionary current. Expanding Consciousness. Three-dimensional, opening the passageways. Brain felt to be opening from fixity. The energy was seen specifically relating to networks awakening deep within the brain mind. This area is the Reflection of the black matter of the universe, since the universe is the projection of consciousness. This Energy then is the activation of an evolutionary current that allows the expansion of Consciousness and the awakening to Synthesis or Volumetric Intelligence. Opening up these passages allows for the flowering of Cosmic Intelligence - which is inherent within the blueprint of the human awakening to Cosmic Man. The brain flowering is the release of the fixity and structure that has contained humankind into linear or planar intelligence for lifetimes.

The Vision whilst creating Arranging 31 was of the Fractaliser or a pyramid that arose to pierce the ‘Seat of Consciousness’ that sits at the base centre of the nose. The central column of the brain was pierced. This began the process of spiritualising the lower coil (that which is below this point) and grounding this current.

Lower Coil – begins at below the Root of the Nose

Seat of Consciousness – Root of the Nose (upper coil)

Randomly attention returns to the Seat of Consciousness relative to the body and rests there. So, “As above so below.”

18. A0044: The Volatile Principle

“The volatile principle is that which escapes weight, which ascends, which spiritualizes matter; it is the essence in movement, the carrier of the divine intention.”

— The Temple of Man, Vol. I, Part One: The Doctrine of Becoming, p. 66 (English edition)

Volatile = Spirit in Motion. It represents lightness, breath, and elevation—the upward movement of consciousness or soul. In alchemical terms, it is analogous to Mercury or sulfuric fire—that which animates and transmutes.

Architecturally, it is reflected in vertical structures (like obelisks, pylons, rising columns). Anatomically, it is linked to the spinal column, breath, and pineal gland—those centers through which human consciousness may rise.

“The Egyptians knew that the volatile is not simply that which evaporates, but that which returns to the source.”

— The Temple of Man, Vol. I, p. 68

Schwaller often uses alchemical polarity:

- Fixed = that which is grounded, material, heavy (e.g., body, earth, form).
- Volatile = that which is ascending, immaterial, spiritual (e.g., breath, Word, soul).

The purpose of initiation is to unite these—bringing the volatile into the fixed and raising the fixed through the volatile, which echoes the Hermetic axiom:

“What is below is as what is above, to accomplish the miracle of the One Thing.”

In witnessing the ‘Volatile Principle’, there was an explosion behind the face, behind the third eye, exploding the fixity of a Black Head. Black Head locked inside - doubt. Mortality face. Root of the nose – explosion, the seat of Consciousness. The failure to grow in the Cosmic Brain leads to growth of Black Mortal form (everything's died), brain or head inside.

19. A0110: The Neter Thoth

"Thoth is the neter of the Word, of measure and order. He is the intelligence which, by the use of proportion, makes the creation perceptible and intelligible."

— The Temple of Man, Vol. I, Part One, "The Word and the Neter Thoth," p. 52 (English edition)

Thoth embodies the mental and harmonic order that allows divine law (Maat) to be expressed, known, and manifested in the world.

In the human being (Anthropocosmic Man):

- Thoth corresponds to the function of consciousness that perceives harmony, understands analogy, and articulates symbolic language.
- He is associated with the cranial vault, especially the pineal region, which Schwaller de Lubicz connects to spiritual perception.

"In man, Thoth is that function of the spirit which understands the divine measures and speaks them into the world."

— The Temple of Man, Vol. I, thematic summary

Vision The Neter Thoth: Energy current experienced at the seat of the nose, behind and backward. Forces a Current of attention backwards and in. Two fractalisers covered brain mind apexes at the Seat of Consciousness. The chamber opens in Blue Light forcing attention in a chamber (temple), current felt to loop. Partial Amrita Nadi. Effect: Evolving Cosmic Mind, potential of human being. Anthropocosmos -> Cosmic Man is the ultimate potential of Man -> human -> cosmic

POSITION 7 [SOUTH]:

20. A0048: Action Synthesis - Pseudosymbol

"The action-synthesis pseudosymbol is not born of lived analogy, but of mental construct. It is the appearance of meaning without its function."

— The Temple of Man, Vol. I, Part One: The Symbolique, p. 38 (English edition)

Schwaller de Lubicz insists that true symbols synthesize action—they unite form and function, motion and principle, being and becoming.

The pseudosymbol is a false synthesis: it appears meaningful, but has no initiatory or transformative power.

“Without function, a symbol is inert. Without lived analogy, it is false. This is the danger of pseudosymbols: they give the illusion of knowledge.”

— The Temple of Man, Vol. I, p. 39

In witnessing ‘Action Synthesis - Pseudosymbol’, the body appears in the lotus position, then the lighted pattern or circulatory network appears – revealed to be more important than the outer cover – outer cover insignificant. Divine Pattern, points of Light or Divine architectural plan for Universe and forms, effect of using this as a cause, i.e. using as an energy.

Effect: Restimulation of the inherent Divine Pattern to remind the form of Divine plan, to Stimulate Enlightened Form.

21. A0060: The Human Vital Principle

“The human vital principle is not merely the breath or circulation, but the intelligent formative power which, by virtue of analogy with cosmic functions, shapes and sustains the body in the image of the cosmos.”

— The Temple of Man, Vol. I, Part One: The Doctrine of Becoming, p. 61 (English edition)

“The human vital principle” is the animating, formative force within the human being that is not reducible to biological life or mechanical function. It is the intelligent energy that shapes the human according to cosmic law and divine archetype. This vital principle is what aligns man with the cosmos—what makes him a living image of the universal order (Anthropocosmos).

Deep in the base of the Body - a flame is alive. Builds as power in the navel, strength ignited - ‘The Human Vital Principle’.

POSITION 7 [EAST]:

22. A0054: Formless Substance Receives Form

Schwaller de Lubicz explores the process through which formless substance - the undifferentiated essence or primordial matter - receives form via the intervention of the Word (the Verb) and through divine proportion, measure, and function.

This principle is central to Egyptian cosmogenesis: creation does not arise from nothing, but rather the shaping of eternal, formless potential into structured, living form - whether in the human body, the temple, or the cosmos itself.

“Formless substance receives form only through the action of the Verb, which imposes measure, number, and rhythm upon the unformed.”

— The Temple of Man, Vol. I, Part One: The Doctrine of the Word, p. 56 (English edition)

Formless Substance:

- The primordial substratum, comparable to Nun in Egyptian cosmology, or the prima materia of alchemy.
- It has potential, but no distinction - no measure, no direction, no function.
- It is fertile but undirected, awaiting activation.

Receiving Form:

- Form arises when the Verb (Divine Word, Logos) acts upon formlessness.
- This action introduces structure: proportion, geometry, movement, function.
- This is the role of Thoth, the neter of measure and intelligibility.

"It is the Word which imprints form upon the chaos of matter; it is number that distinguishes substance."

— The Temple of Man, Vol. I, p. 57

Out of Radiance comes the verb in Action, produces form. Saw a double fractaliser, making things more solid, substantial, grounding - 'Formless Substance Receives Form.

23. A0148: The Verb Acting in God

[repeated, also in position 3]

POSITION 7 [WEST]:

24. A0055: The Principal Of Redemption

"Redemption is the reconquest of the divine state by man through the re-establishment of his original function: to be the consciousness of the cosmos."

— The Temple of Man, Vol. I, Part One: Doctrine of Anthropocosmos, p. 20 (English edition)

"The principle of redemption" as a metaphysical and spiritual process is not rooted in moral guilt or salvation in a religious sense, but in the restoration of divine consciousness within the human being through the recovery of cosmic function, proportion, and unity. Redemption, in this context, is the return of the fallen or fragmented human to their original role as the conscious microcosm of the universe - the Anthropocosmic Man.

"The principle of redemption resides in man's capacity to recover the divine measure, to once again be the axis through which heaven and earth are joined."

— The Temple of Man, Vol. I, p. 21

UNIVERSIDAD DE LA

Point of entrance spherical Radiant Circles of Light – a dimensional doorway opens. Out of the Black. Black = death and mortal identification. A shift into the Light. If there is a readiness in Redemption there is a shift as a way out, a way into the dimensional Light, shift is opened and intuited. Forward and sideways and upward - 'The Principle of Redemption'.

29. The Base: The Radiance Of The Anthropocosmic House

Inscribed on the base of the Anthropocosmic House is a depiction of the sacred architecture and evocation of Anthropocosmic Man, based on the Temple of Luxor. In 1957 Schwaller de Lubicz proposed a discipline and interpretation of the volumetric current and wisdom of ancient Egyptian Pharaonic thought, that had never before in contemporary time been interpreted to this degree of wisdom and understanding.

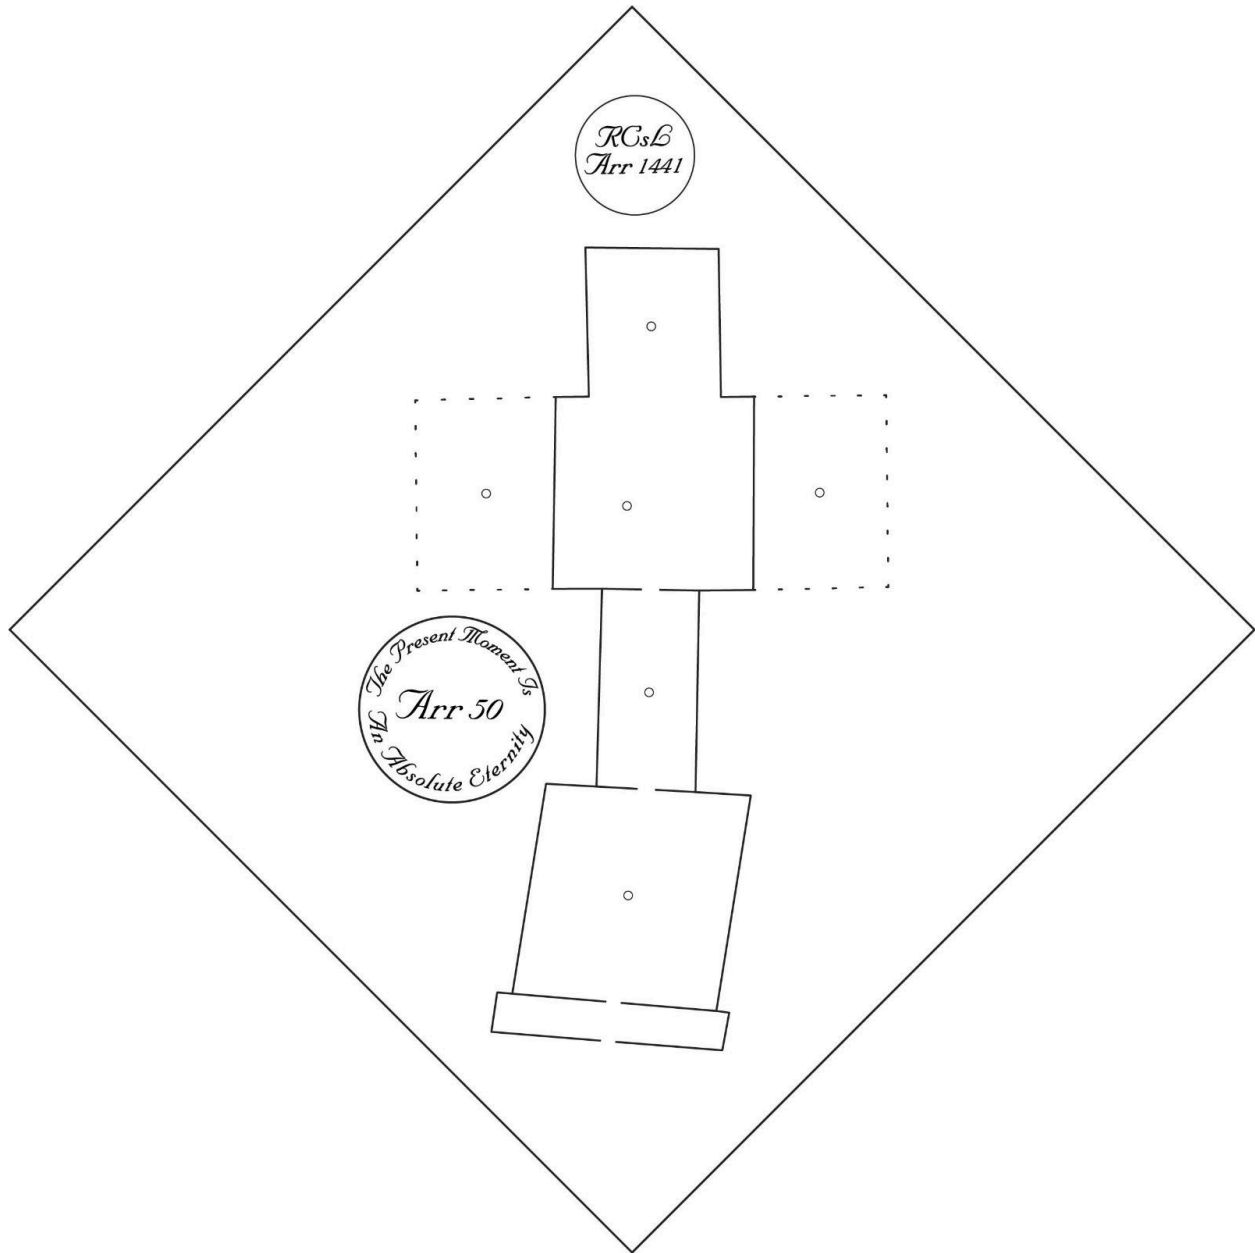

The evocation of this Temple and its shape, holds the human structure. Within the House base, therefore, is held the Enlightened Form. Added to this structure are the lines which have been superimposed along the horizontal plane, which allow for the extension of the arms and the horizontal evocation of heart awakening. This following on from the Christic House and its gnosis of the Christic threshold.

The stones that empower:

- the diamond in the higher mind, the invocation of the Divine Star – consciousness.
- the green emeralds, on arm extensions and legs, invoking the empowerment of the human flesh form
- the yellow topaz to empower the hara or the furnace of the soulfire, the initiatory fire and hara
- and the ruby on the right side of the heart representing the Divine spark entering the form.

The two extra energies appear inscribed on the base, to the north. A1441 and A0050
